Plagiarism is a serious offense towards intellectual development, so JOURNAL OF HEALTH POLICY & OUTCOMES RESEARCH take plagiarism very seriously and authors found involved in plagiarism may be banned from all articles published by us. It includes access to contents of article and submission to published articles.

If the plagiarized content is noticed after the publication of the article then, the same will be notified to the author and depending upon the % of plagiarism the article will be withdrawn from our journal.

Plagiarism: Plagiarism originates from authors using others work without proper citation. Plagiarism is a form of cheating on others' work particularly when it is systematic and intentional. Plagiarism consist of a person's claiming another person's ideas or findings or work as one's own by copying or reproducing the work without due acknowledgement of the source. Plagiarism may occur several forms like presenting substantial extracts from books, journal articles, thesis and other published or unpublished work without properly indicating the source of the material, using close paraphrasing of sentences or whole paragraphs without due acknowledgement in the form of reference to the original work, exactly copying and pasting of data, tables, figures from other publications without acknowledging the source and closely replicating the structure of someone else's one's own argument without apparent reference and due credit to the source.

Authors have to be fully aware that plagiarism is wrong and they must know that plagiarism is the use of another person's idea or published work and to pretend that it is one's own.

Authors have to declare that each contribution to their article or project have been acknowledged and source of information from other peoples' published or unpublished works have been cited referenced. Authors have to certify that they are solely responsible for text of the article and work included in the article along with any incomplete reference.

JOURNAL OF HEALTH POLICY & OUTCOMES RESEARCH does not encourage any form of Plagiarism. Hence, we strongly recommend you to check your content before submitting it to any of our Journals for publication.
